SINGAPORE FLYING COLLEGE AND AEROMIL PACIFIC ANNOUNCE THE PURCHASE OF FIVE NEW CESSNA CITATION MUSTANG AIRCRAFT

The Singapore Flying College (SFC) and Aeromil Pacific, the exclusive distributor for Cessna Citation aircraft in Australia and New Zealand, announced today that the College has signed contracts for the purchase of five new Cessna Citation Mustang jet aircraft. The Mustangs will form the future of Advanced Training at the college into the next decade.

Singapore Flying College is a wholly owned subsidiary of Singapore Airlines, responsible for ab initio and Advanced pilot training. It has a substantial Advanced Training facility on the Sunshine Coast Airport in Queensland and currently operates four aircraft, two simulators and a college campus, producing up to 200 graduates each year. A considerable investment has been made by SFC in infrastructure and employment on the airport. Aeromil Pacific already provides maintenance and other support elements for the College and will further develop its Citation service capabilities in Queensland later in 2009.

The announcement today is a further development of the very successful relationship between Singapore Flying College and Aeromil Pacific that began in 2001. Captain Len McCully, Singapore Flying College Principal and General Manager said "the partnership with Aeromil Pacific will play an important part in the integration of the Mustang into our Advanced Training program and for the ongoing support of the aircraft. We look forward to our continuing excellent working relationship".

The introduction of the new Citation Mustangs into the SFC pilot Advanced Training program will bring with it more efficient and cost effective operations associated with the new, advanced jet aircraft. Steve Padgett, Aeromil Pacific Managing Director, said "we are delighted with the selection of the Mustang by Singapore Flying College; it is a natural choice going forward in this current economic environment".

The five new Cessna Citation Mustangs will be delivered by the Cessna Aircraft Company to Singapore Flying College over the next three years, replacing the existing aircraft that are currently in service. The arrival of the first Mustang on the Sunshine Coast Airport is scheduled for early 2010, along with two full flight level D Mustang Simulators later in the year.
